

The victorious Fohenagh team who defeated Castlegar in the final of the County Galway Senior Hurling Championship at Athenry on Sunday. It was Fohenagh's first senior title and thrill-packed game was a replay.

"CASTLE" FELL IN HURLING FINAL: FOHENAGH WIN AT THE "POST"

Sweeney, Star of the Champions

CASTLEGAR have fallen and the new champions are Fohenagh. At Kenny Memorial Park on Sunday the curtain on the 1959 hurling season was pulled down in dramatic fashion as Fohenagh came from behind in a great second half rally to pip Castlegar on the post by a solitary point. A "lifeline" free thrown to Castlegar in the closing stages was fired outside by old reliable, Johnny Molloy, but in reiterating now the pulsating moments of a memorable game one feels the title rests in the right place.

This was a game fit for the purist. It had all the ingredients of what a good game of hurling should have. Crazy goals, close, hard hurling, and withal played in a manner that was a credit to the thirty combatants. It was a game patterned somewhat on the drawn encounter at Pearse Stadium. Blessed, on paper at least, with much the finer side, Castlegar looked the part especially in the second half, when they were sitting pretty with Fohenagh trailing.

SUPERB TACKLING

Any potential extra speed that Castlegar possessed was nullified by superb tackling by Fohenagh backmen, most notably Jim Molloy, Mick Coen, P. J. Killalea, and T. Moylett. Defences were turned into attack at a speed that was bewildering but indeed, the Fohenagh forward division was so lax in the first half that the destiny of the game seemed well nigh pointed. No praise can be too high for a Fohenagh team that fought against adversity and finally turned defeat into a merited victory.

None other advanced his reputation more than Tim Sweeney, the master marksman, who scored one point and, from the point of his side, in total, in this, surely one of his finest hours ever in the service of his club. Topical point of discussion when the game was replayed at cross-roads and taverns centred around the validity of Fohenagh's sensational goal scored by Tony O'Gorman. Many there were, who swore that it had not crossed the line but the umpires had no doubt whatever in their minds that it had. The score was a tonic for Fohenagh, it seemed to spur them to new life, just at a time when the dice seemed dead against them.

If Tim Sweeney took supreme honours in the winners' side he was closely followed by P. J. Lally who hurried with consistency throughout. Tony O'Gorman's goal must surely earn him a place among the celebrated of this game and Jim Molloy did even better than this in the drawn game and more especially in the second half when Castlegar tried to hammer home a winner. Frank Madden, like his opposite, was in peak form and indeed he could not be blamed for those that caught him on the wrong foot.

Abbie Glynn, when he came on, did surprisingly well. He, Tim Glynn, Ger Sweeney, F. Bleahan, Glynn and T. Killalea after a rather shaky start. Top marks in this sector must go, however, to Tom Glynn, for a fine display against Johnny Molloy.

BACKMEN SHONE

Surprisingly enough, the Shaughnessy brothers, Pat and Kevin, did not strike that happy partnership at centrefield as they have hitherto done. They faltered on a good number of occasions but entered into the fray as the "battle" wore on. Two men who stood head and shoulders over all backmen were Seamus Cullinane and Johnny Molloy, both played with rare gusto and one marvelled at the speed and accuracy which both displayed excepting of course that last free of which so much has been talked.

Star of the twelve times champions was Paddy Egan, he was in rare form on Sunday and snatched 2-1 for his side. Others to be mentioned were Paddy Egan, Tom Collins, and J. J. Wall. Micky Burke, star of yesterday, returned to the Castlegar side but his hurling has been dulled by the passing of time and while he tried hard he could not measure up to his former greatness.

Carr, in goal, was in fine fettle but he too had good backmen in the already mentioned Cullinane, Tim Broderick, John Corcoran, John Molloy, M. Fox and Tom Egan. Castlegar were short Eddie Abberton, Steve Francis, and Paddy Cummings, from the drawn game, while Fohenagh had to do without the services of Nicholas Murray and John Sweeney.

The game was perhaps more of a thrilling spectacle than the drawn encounter, although the hurling was so close that it completely ruled out stylish play and indeed, the authorities concerned might have cut the grass a little shorter. And yes, a scorecard at Athenry would be much appreciated by the spectators. Stewarding and facilities left little to be desired at Athenry and the marks once again to referee Mick Quaine.

After the drawn game we talked in terms of a repeat and we got it; both teams cannot be complimented too much in serving us such an hour

"FIGHTING" FOHENAGH

Again Lally and Sweeney combined effectively to bring about another point from a free and things looked much brighter for Fohenagh as they trailed by one goal. Ter. Sweeney halted a Castlegar raid and passed to Lally from which F. Glynn secured to narrow the gap further with a point. Fohenagh followers were now shouting for another score and they did not have long to wait; Tim Sweeney bamboozled four Castlegar players and sent over a point and now Fohenagh were just trailing by one point—3-5 to 2-7. Castlegar might have added another but the ball sailed outside and now they looked worried. Again it was Fohenagh who fought back and they were rewarded with yet another Tim Sweeney point to make it level pegging.

But Castlegar still undaunted came back in a fighting finish and goal. Madden in saving his lines brought about a "seventy" which Johnny Molloy sent straight to the net and here it looked all over Fohenagh had other ideas indeed, and they proved it to the hilt but not before they had some anxious moments as P.

Fohenagh began with such pace, skill, and authority, that Castlegar were floundering in the face of opposition. They swept into the attack in three successive raids the first of which Tom Glynn shot wide when a golden opportunity presented itself. Next Tony O'Gorman fired wide before Tim Sweeney opened for Fohenagh with a point from free. Next came a P. J. Lally point and Castlegar were all at sea before Paddy Egan sent them in the hunt only to shoot wide.

From the puck-out, Tom Egan saved a dangerous situation for Castlegar and with hurling now reaching perfection order, Fohenagh were on the rampage but could not force a strong Castlegar defence. Tom Glynn connected with a pile-driver and John Carr halted its march before P. J. Killalea carried it to safety. Lally now showed up in good light as he held a Gabriel Egan shot and J. J. Wall was showing up well for Castlegar. P. Nolan was wide from a thirty yards free and seconds later, the same player connected with a shot from the side of his side, only to see it whistle past the upright.

Fifteen minutes gone and Castlegar were beginning to show true form. Paddy Egan lashed in a good ball from the point and Madden in goal for Fohenagh, brought off a fine save. Tim Sweeney fell back to relieve pressure and again Madden halted two hot raids before P. J. Wall opened Castlegar's account with a point. At the other end, F. Glynn raised a white flag for Fohenagh to put them ahead by three points to two. J. Carr saved a smashing drive from Tim Sweeney and the latter shot a good effort wide before Tom Collins reduced the lead with a Castlegar point.

At this juncture—twenty minutes past—Tim Sweeney bore the mantle of destruction at centrefield and outlying areas. Wherever he tread danger threatened, and try as they might, Castlegar failed miserably to subdue him. Highlight of the next few minutes was a fine save by F. Madden and Gabriel Egan shot wide when a goal looked certain.

SWEENEY EVERYWHERE

A forty yards free to Castlegar taken by Johnny Molloy, who was cleared to a waiting Paddy Egan, who shot to the Fohenagh net with Frank Madden very much unsighted. Castlegar now in hot pursuit were halted twice in quick succession by F. Madden, and P. J. Lally dropped back to relieve the brunt of Castlegar's raids. From another raid P. Nolan secured possession and shot a good point to leave Castlegar ahead by one goal. Madden was in fine fettle in the Fohenagh goal pulling down shots from all angles before Gabriel Egan drove home a good goal for Castlegar. Tim Sweeney had a chance to narrow the gap in the next minute but his twenty-five yards free was wide. Paddy Egan, in making tracks to goal was halted by a flying hurley and from the resultant free he rocketed the ball into the net through a wall of defenders. Now half time, and Castlegar led by 3-3 to 0-3.

On the re-start, Castlegar set about their work in fine fashion when Paddy Egan sent over a point and trumps seemed to be turned in their favour as they dominated the exchanges. Then the maestro himself, Tim Sweeney struck back, he collected at midfield and bounded forward before shooting a "made to measure" goal, just inside the upright. Sweeney turning up in the most unexpected places now appeared in the forward division, from where he fired in a pile driver only to see it capably handled by J. Carr. P. Shaughnessy was wide from the centre mark and with nine minutes gone Johnny Molloy sent over from a forty yards free to put Castlegar at 3-5 to 1-3 for Fohenagh.

Sweeney collected the puck out and raced forward eluding four defenders as he did so, his drive was however halted in gallant style by Carr in goal. A free to Fohenagh was fired in by Sweeney but again Carr rose to tip it dangerously into the square from where it was cleared by waiting backmen to the irrepressible Stewarding and facilities left little to be desired at Athenry and the marks once again to referee Mick Quaine.

Abbie Glynn had in the meantime replaced Liam Manning at midfield for Fohenagh and somehow the change seemed to effect a cure in this sector as O'Gorman had been called

GALWAY HURLERS CLASH WITH CORK

Galway, holders, face Cork in the semi-final of the Oireachtas tournament at Pearse Stadium, on Sunday, and it will be interesting to see how they fare since defeat at the hands of Waterford, now in the All-Ireland final, still hangs over them.

The following is the team: P. Fahy, T. Conway, S. Cullinane, J. Molloy, J. Cahalan, M. Sweeney, J. Duggan, J. Salmon, P. J. Lally, T. Sweeney, P. Egan, P. J. Corcoran, F. Glynn, J. Lawless, J. A. Conroy, Subs.: F. Benson, P. Burke, E. Derivan, G. Cahill, J. Lyons, T. Egan, T. Moylett.

It was high certain that some pruning would be done on the heels of the Munster collapse and whether a cure has been effected will not be learned until Sunday evening. Cork, we know, are sending along a strong side with such players as: John Brohan, Lyons, McCarthy, Goulding, Fitzgerald, Lynam and Barry.

Missing from the Galway side that went down to Waterford will be Jim Fives, injured. M. Fox, now in England; E. Derivan and P. Burke are reduced to substitutes status, while I. Gavin and R. Stanley are not considered.

Taken all round, the Galway looks quite compact and if Cork line out as selected the fare should be in keeping with the duels of the past between these sides.

P. Fahy, the former junior who came on against Waterford, guards the Galway net and S. Cullinane moves from the corner back berth to the full line. M. Fox, who played an outstanding part for Fohenagh in the two clashes with Castlegar, is rightly given his big chance. Into the right half back position steps J. Cahalan, the former junior while Mike Sweeney takes over in the centre from Jim Fives. P. J. Lally, brilliant for Fohenagh in the last two outings, lines out at the centre mark while Joe Salmon, Frank Glynn, and another to impress in the Fohenagh and Castlegar clash and his selection is welcomed.

CLIFDEN TROUNCED

In their Divisional Final of the Junior Co. Championship, Clonbur coasted to an easy victory over a disappointing Clifden fifteen.

Clifden on their home ground and with the aid of many of their senior team, could not cope with the scientific display of a consistent Clonbur team who, on the previous Sunday, were lucky to escape with an up and coming Ballyconneely team.

Clonbur got off to a good start with points by O'Neill, Corbett and Kane.

Clifden replied with a well taken point by Sean Mannion. Before the interval Clonbur notched up another three points. Clifden's low scoring in this half was mainly due to the fact that all their attacks were nipped in the bud by the brilliant S. O'Neill.

On the resumption M. Corbett and T. King exchanged points. Clonbur added two points by P. Doyle and L. Coyne. Clifden secured three points per King (2) and F. Dyer (1).

Clonbur then stirred out of their complacency and put the issue beyond doubt and the ultimate winners for Clonbur were the Joyce brothers, O'Meara, P. Joyce and Mulroe.

D. Mahony and B. Byrne excelled for Clonbur in the middle. Best for Clifden were P. Davin, S. Mannion, the King brothers, F. Dyer and P. O'Malley.

Referee: Rev. Bro. Basil.

CAMOGIE FINAL

THE Clare County Camogie Final at Feakle, on Sunday, between Killanena and Colaishte Mhuire. Ennis, exceeded all expectations.

The players were piped on to the field by the Tulla Band. The referee was Miss Mary Barry, Ennistymon.

The spectators were afforded an excellent game and the ultimate winners were Killanena (East Clare) with a 2 goals 1 point victory to Colaishte Mhuire's (North Clare) 1 goal.

Notwithstanding this victory the latter played well and were unlucky. After the match the captain of the winning team, holding the trophy, was chaired off the field and through the town to the hall where both teams were entertained.

Killanena: Marie Collins, Mary Walsh, Nora Broderick, Bridget Allen, Chrissie Moroney, Mary Spelman, Nancy Brady, Celia Brady, Brid Hayes, Tess Maloney, Eileen McMahon, Nancy Collins. Subs.: Josie Sammon, Vera O'Brien, Frances Vaughan, Kitty McInerney.

Colaishte Mhuire (Ennis): Anne Harrington, Roisin Harrington, Mary Harrington, Mary Kelly, Mary Pigot, Vera MacMahon, Brenda Considine, Anne Maher, Maria Kennedy, Dey Hickey, Mary Whyte, Catherine Kennedy, Bernadette McMahon. Subs.: Anne Considine, Mary Kerin, Brid McCorry.
